

I do not agree with the Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) idea to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in a proceeding before the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).
I don not feel the CBA attempt to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers is valid.

I am opposed to the weakening of Indiana's law. The law in Indiana has worked out great. If one group is able to do it then I am sure more groups will try in the future. It has been so nice not to be bothered by unwanted calls.
